THE INVENTOR OF LAMINATE

110 years of Formica

For 110 years, the story of the Formica® brand has been one of discovery and innovation. Formica is an iconic brand inextricably linked to the invention of the original High Pressure Laminate (HPL). Formica® brand celebrated 100 years in 2013.

Founded by Herbert A. Faber and Daniel J. O’ Conor in the year 1913, Formica® has been a forerunner in laminates production worldwide. Before 1913, all laminates were made from the mineral mica but with roots in chemistry and engineering, Faber and Conor stumbled upon a crucial and more economical alternative and soon adopted this method of producing laminates that were strong, light, and excellent electrical insulators and since they became a very good substitute “for” the mineral “mica”, the brand was conceptually named “Formica”.

The heritage and brand reputation of the Formica Group of companies has been founded on quality, service and innovative product lines. Formica has developed an unrivaled expertise that ensures products meet the needs of their applications as well as market demands.

GLOBAL SERIES

GLOBAL

An impression comes to life, an imprint of emotion. It comes together like brush strokes to a painting—the elegance of oak, the poise of herringbone, and the gentle serenity of peruvian clay.

Just like the way it feels like to meet a person. And just like with people —we feel closer to certain spaces, more than others

Patterns are movements
A lucid vision, a splash of vitality.

This is how an otherwise quiet space breathes new life. Between modern geometric shapes and classical flourishes, patterns create the illusion of movement in any room.
